A B

A : If I created a YouTube channel, I would focus on educational content, particularly related to science experiments and explanations. The first reason is that I believe that learning through hands-on experiments can make science more interesting and easier to understand. Children in particular could learn much from viewing experiments in real time, regardless of whether their schools had the equipment and facilities to run them. Secondly, science is a topic that affects all our lives. Therefore, making it fun and easily accessible could inspire young people to join STEM fields. To sum up, my channel would try to educate young people, making learning science an enjoyable and interactive experience for all.
B : I believe people should use their real names on social media. First, this will encourage responsibility. When people use real names, they tend to think more carefully about their posts and comments, knowing these are linked to their true identity. As a result, harmful behavior such as cyberbullying or spreading false information will decrease. Another reason is using real names promotes trust. If we know we are talking to real people, we can interact more confidently and build stronger relationships. In conclusion, using real names creates safer and more respectful online interactions, which benefits everyone involved.
